Abstract
The didactic concept that is at the foundation of this method is learning through practice. It is a simulation of the activity from inside a real company. Pupils have a strong motivation to work with such a teaching model because they can put into practice the theoretical knowledge and they can gain new professional skills.

Keywords: simulated enterprise, ROCT, learning through practice

1. Introduction
The “Simulated enterprise” represents a model of a real company, being a method of practical approach for content integration. Also, this method is designed to form personal aptitudes and competences necessary in the economic field, from low-level positions to top-lever management positions.

Inside a “simulated enterprise” the pupils can occupy different positions, either as a manager or as an employee, in this way being responsible for their tasks and form their entrepreneurship skills. At the same time, in a “simulated enterprise” all processes and transactions are based on real company activities, the company being structured in classic departments: human resources, administrative office, marketing, logistics, accounting etc.

The entire activity of the “simulated enterprise” takes place according to the national law that all real companies respect.

The method “simulated enterprise” has two main characteristics:

- Virtual: there are no money and no goods.
- Realistic: it uses national commercial laws, information flux and documents circuit.

2. The constitution of a “simulated enterprise”

The constitution of a “simulated enterprise” is based on ROCT (Romanian Branch of Fictive Companies) demands. The documentation required to start a “simulated enterprise” is slightly simplified from the one used in reality because of the necessity to ease the correspondence between the companies and ROCT. Yet, the documentation is mainly according to the O.U.G. 76/2001 with following changes and during classes their real form is presented.
A constituted and authorized “simulated enterprise” is not closed after one or two school years (when pupils are in the XI or XII grade), but is taken by the next generation. Usually, the main authorized companies are the ones that have as main activity wholesale commerce or services. “Simulated enterprise” based on banks model, production or retail companies are not approved.

The documentation is elaborated in two copies: one is sent by post office at ROCT, and the other one is kept at the fictive company. After the registration and authorization of the company a registration certificate and its annexes are issued.

All payment/return operations between different fictive companies made through the ROCT – VIRTUAL BANK. For the success of these operations all fictive companies from Romania have to open a domestic and a foreign account at the ROCT - Virtual Bank. This procedure is valid only for the cash-flow operations, the supply/sale operations being executed directly between the companies.

One of the main key components of the learning process is the simulation of failure and successful situations. Wrong decisions, that in real life could jeopardize the company itself, in a “simulated enterprise” it cannot have a negative impact because of the virtual character of all situations and operations.

The accumulation of certain abilities, skills and professional habits is possible through simulations of different situations that happen inside a real company. It is necessary that this simulation is multiple as structure and consistency. Different key-competences (e.g. team work, interdisciplinarity use of knowledge, communication skills, ability to take decisions) enable the pupils to obtain professional abilities and certain flexibility that are necessary on the labor market nowadays. At the same time, the pupil can discover through different positions held inside a “simulated enterprise” a certain domain for future professional development. In this way, the skills obtained practicing this learning method inside an education establishment can help a young employee to reduce his period of accommodation at his new work place being already familiar with certain activities from inside a company, this thing being also benefice for the employer.

The power of a “simulated enterprise” is determined by the transactions that are made inside the national and international market of “simulated enterprise” and also by the communication with the external environment of the “simulated enterprise”: cooperation with mother-company/mentor company, other economic agents, state institutions etc.

Inside a “simulated enterprise” a real synergy of interdisciplinarity contents is made: economics, accounting, commercial correspondence, foreign languages, informatics, law and legislation, marketing, management etc.

The didactic concept that is at the base of this method is learning through practice. It is a simulation of the activity from inside a real company. The motivation is really strong for the pupils to work inside this kind of a enterprise because they can put into practice the theoretical knowledge and they can adopt new professional skills.

An effective way to harness the activity of the simulated enterprises is by organizing a "Simulated Enterprises' Fair".

Preparing for the fair sets a new challenge for the simulated enterprises. Meeting business partners and direct communication with them is possible only through business fairs. Students can negotiate in real time, they can learn how to conduct business and they develop self-confidence.

5. Conclusions
The experience of leading direct negotiations and the team spirit that is gained through out the process can be practiced successfully only in a “Simulated Enterprises’ Fair”. After the ending of the fair, the execution of the deliveries, the signing of contracts and settlement of invoices will also make students more experienced.

The role of the fair:
- Recognition of student work;
- A way to express creativity;
- Conducting direct transactions with other simulated enterprises;
- Promoting locally the concept of the “simulated enterprise”;
- The possibility of obtaining funding sources for activities of the enterprise;
- Involving parents and the local community within the work of the students.

Objectives:
- Motivation to achieve results;
- Empowering students;
- Creating a simulated business environment as close as possible to a real business environment;
- Skills training;
- Business language acquisition;
- Developing negotiation skills in business development.

The “Simulated Enterprise” - a complex method, with good results - is an attractive challenge for both the students and the economics teachers from the Economic College "Dimitrie Cantemir" in Suceava.
