

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Georgeta CISLARU is a professor of linguistics at the University of Paris Nanterre, researcher at the MoDyCo laboratory (CNRS-Paris Nanterre) and junior scholar of the Institut Universitaire de France (2020). Her research focuses on text and discourse analysis, semantics and writing. She has published or co-published several works on meaning construction and sharing, textualisation processes and emotions in discourse.

gcislaru@parisnanterre.fr

georgeta.cislaru@sorbonne-nouvelle.fr

Wolf DIETRICH is Professor emeritus of the University of Münster (Germany). From 1973 through 2006 he held the Chair of Romance Philology (Linguistics) at the University of Münster (Germany). His main interests are historical linguistics, syntax, word formation, semantics, comparative linguistics and linguistic historiography in French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Romanian and in languages of the Tupi family. Among his publications are also textbooks for students (Introduction to Spanish/to French linguistics, both in German). He was co-director of the Atlas Lingüístico Guaraní-Románico (2009 and 2015). His current research interest is the publication of posthumous manuscripts of Eugenio Coseriu, especially his "Geschichte der romanischen Sprachwissenschaft" (History of Romance Linguistics). He is also preparing the publication of a 19th century manuscript that contains the first grammar of Guarayú (Tupi-Guarani).

dietriw@uni-muenster.de

Dmitry GUREVICH is associate professor in the Department of Ibero-Romance linguistics of the Faculty of Philology at Lomonosov Moscow State University, from which he holds a BA in Romance Linguistics, and at which he is teaching Spanish, Portuguese and a number of theoretical courses like Spanish syntax, Portuguese syntax, Contrastive grammar of Ibero-Romance languages, Brazilian Portuguese. His research interests mainly regard sociolinguistics, theory of language change and variation and functional grammar.

dmtgrvch@gmail.com

Gerda HAßLER was Professor of Linguistics and Applied Linguistics at the Institute of Romance Studies at the University of Potsdam from 1993 to 2020. She studied Romance and Slavic languages and literature at Martin Luther University Halle-Wittenberg, completed her doctorate there in 1978 with a thesis on language theories of the Enlightenment on the role of language in the cognitive process in the subject of general linguistics and habilitated in 1984 with a thesis on the history of the semantic concept of value from the 18th to the 20th century. She is editor of the journal Beiträge zur Geschichte der Sprachwissenschaft (Contributions to the History of Linguistics). Her current research interests are functional grammar and pragmatics, historical semantics and history of linguistics. She is an associate member of the Laboratoire Modèles, Dynamiques, Corpus of the Université Paris Nanterre and the Laboratoire de Recherche sur le Langage of the Université Clermont Auvergne. She has lectured at universities in France, Spain, Portugal, Italy, the UK, Finland, Russia, Peru, Argentina, Tunisia, Israel, Romania, the USA, Canada and China. She has been a member of the Leibniz-Sozietät der Wissenschaften zu Berlin since 2018.

gerda.hassler@uni-potsdam.de

Yusuke KANAZAWA graduated from the Department of English Studies, Kobe City University of Foreign Studies in 2003.

He obtained his master's degree in linguistics from Graduate School of Letters, Kyoto University in 2005. He pursued his studies at the University of Cagliari with a scholarship from the Italian government in 2007. He obtained his PhD from Graduate School of Letters, Kyoto University in linguistics in 2010. He was a researcher at JSPS (Japan Society for the Promotion of Science) from 2011 to 2012, and was a lecturer in Shiga Junior College from 2013 to 2019. Currently he is a lecturer at the Faculty of International Studies, Kindai University and is dedicated to the study of Sardinian and Romance linguistics. His masterpiece is Diachronic Study of Verbal Morphology in Sardinian. Shōkadō, 2011.

y-kanazawa@intl.kindai.ac.jp

Víctor Lara BERMEJO has obtained a PhD in Spanish and Portuguese linguistics from the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. He is specialised in dialectology and his career has focused on the pronouns of address and their inflections in the Hispanic and Lusophone world. Moreover, he has carried out fieldwork throughout the southwest of the Iberian Peninsula in order to study the geolinguistics and sociolinguistics of its politeness system. He has also researched on the transitivity of a number of unaccusative verbs in western Peninsular Spanish and he has disseminated the geolinguistic distribution of many dialect phenomena at an Ibero-Romance level. Currently, he is dealing with the creation of evidentiality in the Iberian Peninsula and the whole Romance Europe as well as undertaking a study on the 18th- and 19th-century European Portuguese and Andalusian Spanish. He has worked in Spain, Switzerland and Italy, and is at present a professor at the Universidad de Cádiz, as well as the winner of a Marie Curie fellowship granted by the European Commission.

viktoresc@hotmail.com

Dr. Gina MĂCIUCĂ is currently habilitated tenured Professor at Ștefan cel Mare University of Suceava, Romania, where she teaches courses in Germanic Linguistics as well as Contrastive Approaches to Romance and Germanic languages, and is also founding director of Synergia Linguarum Centre for Foreign Studies, co-director of Inter Litteras Research Centre, founding editor-in-chief of the academic journal Concordia Discors vs Discordia Concors and thesis supervisor of PhD candidates. She did her PhD dissertation on Comparative Philology and conducted part of her PhD research at Ludwig-Maximilians-University in Munich, with the sponsorship of the DAAD Stiftung and under the competent tutelage of Professor Kurt Rein, one of the leading authorities on contrastive linguistics. Dr. Măciucă has single-authored more than 100 contributions to national and international scientific journals and 8 books on linguistics, and co-authored three further books on comparative philology. She participated as coordinator of the subproject “Word-Formation Characteristics of Romanian” (2005-2007) in the European project Word-Formation Typology of Languages (main coordinators: Professor Pavol Štekauer, Slovakia, and Professor Salvador Valera, Spain) and is scientific adviser on Romanian of the book “Word-Formation in the World’s Languages. A Typological Survey” (authors: Pavol Štekauer, Salvador Valera, Livia Körtevényessy), published by Cambridge University Press. Dr Măciucă is also the coordinator of the Comparatistica Series and scientific adviser on Comparative Philology of Ștefan cel Mare University Press, an expert evaluator of research projects with both the Romanian National Council for Scientific Research and The Slovak Research and Development Agency, a scientific committee member of academic journals such as SKASE Journal of Theoretical Linguistics and SKASE Journal of Translation and Interpretation (Slovakia), Speech and Context (Republic of Moldova), Language and Literature - European Landmarks of Identity (Romania), Studii de Gramatică Contrastivă (Romania), Ștefan cel Mare University Annals (the Series on Linguistics) and of international conferences (Science and Language, Inter Litteras et Terras), as well as a listee of Who's Who in the World 2012 and 2014 and 2000 Outstanding Intellectuals of the 21st Century (7th and 8th eds., published by International Biographical Centre, Cambridge, UK). She has published on a wide array of topics, but her main areas of interest remain contrastive grammar and phraseology of Romance and Germanic languages, a field in which, with support of a governmental grant, she carried out research as chief coordinator of the project Lexico-Morphological Idiosyncrasies of Romanian as Compared with European Romance and Germanic Languages (2009-2011), as well as main author and editor of the books Idiosyncrasies of Verbs in Romanian as Compared with European Romance and Germanic Languages (2011) and Idiosyncrasies of Nouns in Romanian as Compared with European Romance and Germanic Languages (2012).

ginamaciuca@litere.usv.ro

Emma TĂMÂIANU-MORITA is currently Professor of Linguistics at Kindai University (Faculty of International Studies), in Osaka, Japan, where she teaches courses in the fields of Communication Studies, Cultural semiotics, Intercultural communication, Translation Studies. She started her academic career in 1990 at Babes-Bolyai University, Cluj-Napoca, Romania (Chair of General Linguistics and Semiotics), and from 2009 to 2016 she worked as Professor of Linguistics at Akita University, Japan. Her principal fields of research are text linguistics, with special focus on the issue of text typology, contrastive linguistics and translation studies (using textual material mainly from English, Japanese, Romanian and Spanish), cultural semiotics. Among her main publications are four single-authored books, four co-authored books, one translated book, one edited volume, over 70 scientific papers, as well as several translations of linguistic studies. She presented numerous papers at international conferences in Belgium, Brazil, Czech Republic, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Spain, Romania and Switzerland.

etamaian@yahoo.com

Liubov ZHOLUDEVA is associate professor in the Department of Romance linguistics of the Faculty of Philology at Lomonosov Moscow State University, from which she holds a BA (2006), a PhD (2009) and a ScD (2019). She was also a Scholarship holder of the Italian Cultural Institute (2008-2009). PhD (2009), ScD (2019). Her main fields of research are Romance languages, history of Italian, historical sociolinguistics, syntax, functional stylistics, theory of language variation.

l.zholudeva@gmail.com