INTRODUCTION

Religion

Religious tourism tells us about the existence of God. As human beings we believe that there is a supernatural power that defines and operates everything in this universe according to his/her own will. The people who believe in God express their devotion towards God through various religious practices. They believe in God is very much related to Einstein law of conservation of energy which tells us that energy can neither be created nor be destroyed only can be changed from one form to another.

Religion is a way to communicate with God, many authors have given different-different theories of religion as “Stewart Elliot Guthrie” defines religion as “Religion is an attribute of human characteristics to non-human things or events,” “Mircea Eliade” defines “Religion is an illusion whose chief purpose is to provide reason and an excuse to keep society functioning as it is, religion is opinion of the masses” “Taylor and Frazor” defines “Religion exists in order to help people make sense of events on unseen hidden forces”.

Through various theories given by many authors explains that religion tells us about the thing which is beyond our understandings.

Religious Tourism

Defining religious tourism is not an easy job. There are many authors who have given numerous definition of religious tourism. Religious tourism sometimes called faith tourism is tourism where people travel to unleash the power of religious places with the purposes of pilgrimage missionary or leisure, Religious tourism involves traveling with a core motive of experiencing and exploring religious places, forms, or the products religious places induce like art, traditions, culture, wellness tourism (health and healing) is also considered as a part of religious tourism.

Religious tourism is mainly focused on destinations that have numerous religious links are well known for healing and spiritual powers and has diverse culture, India has been among highly spiritual places in the world.

“The religious person is one who seeks coherence and meaning in this world and religious culture is one that has a clearly structured world view. The religious impulse is to tie things together-All human being is religious religion is broadly defined as the impulse for coherence and meaning. The strength of impulse varies for enormously from culture to culture and from person to person,”-Tuan (1976, in Monisha Chattopadhyaya, 2006)

Religious Tourism in India

Religious tourism in India depends on two aspects, first is the faith of domestic tourist who believes on the religious destination they visit and second is the foreign tourist who visits a particular religious destination in order to experience the spirituality, novelty of the religious places. Many tourists from all over the comes to India to experience the spirituality of holy place in India even the people who are non-religious visits these holy places to know about the importance of these places. There is a various hidden history behind the religious places which everyone wants to know whether the person is religious or non-religious.

A study conducted by Lokniti at Delhi-based center for the study of Developing Society (CSDS) finds that one of two Indians plans to visit the religious tourist destination in the next two year and many people are doing so in the past two years. In the year 2015 a study conducted by Lokniti on “Religious attitude, behavior and practice” shows that in all religious major section of the population have visited religious tourist destination in the past two years and one of two Indians are planning to visit the religious destination in the next two years. This shows that there is a vast opportunity in the growth of religious tourism in India in future. The rise of faith in religion in the country will increase the religious tourism in the country in the coming year, various study has shown that more than 25% people in India have moved towards religious faith in the last 4-5 years. Among all tourists destination, religious places are on the top to attract tourist towards them.

According to the State of National Study Conducted by Lokniti in 2008 found that 39% of respondent preferred holy sites for their vocation. The NSSO report shows that the expenditure on religious trips has shown significant growth during these periods and is on the second rank in terms of household's person who visits these religious tourist destinations. According to these studies, it can be concluded that religious tourism in the country will grow at a rapid speed in the coming years.
