INTRODUCTION

Initially established in the 1970s, the insect specimen library of Kunming Institute of Zoology (KIZ), Chinese Academy of Science (CAS) now resides within the Kunming Natural History Museum of Zoology (KNHMZ) at KIZ and includes more 400 000 specimens. Type specimens preserved in KIZ were primarily obtained via scholars at KIZ as well as some donors from other institutions. This article presents a detailed list of insect type specimens deposited in the KNHMZ with correction information for some specimens.

As of March 2015, 3412 type specimens belonging to 266 species/subspecies of 37 families in 9 orders (Odonata, Isoptera, Mantodea, Orthoptera, Hemiptera, Coleoptera, Diptera, Hymenoptera and Lepidoptera) are included in the curated collections. In detail, there are 83 Diptera type and 810 specimens; followed 45 Coleoptera species/subspecies and 179 specimens; 39 Lepidoptera species/subspecies and 165 specimens; 37 Isoptera species and 1461 specimens. Geographically, these specimens were mainly collected from Yunnan, Hubei, Hunan, Guizhou, and Sichuan provinces in the People's Republic of China.

MATERIAL AND METHODS

All the original documents of types deposited in the KNHMZ have been collected, and then the information of type specimens was checked against the original description. Available authors were invited to check the status of these specimens and/or check the label information of specimens that were found to be inconsistent with their original descriptions.

The labels of type specimens generally consist of specimen label, identification label, and type label. The type labels have different colours from other labels, with type labels of holotype, paratype, and allotype being respectively done in red, yellow and blue. By convention, a serial number label of specimens is under each specimen. When the label information was not consistent with description, both information are presented as follows: information on label (information in original description).

DISCUSSION

In this article, we found several over-arching types of problems in the curation of the deposited types at the KNHMZ. First, some information was misprinted in original descriptions, e.g., Roman numerals specifying collection were generally misprinted or illegible. Second, some mistakes occurred in which information on a label was not and/or incorrectly transferred to the original description (for publication). Additionally, after publishing records of new species, researchers did not add the type labels.

As curators, we suggest that before the type specimen are deposited in the museum, they should be checked for consistency between label and original description, and marked as having or not having a type label. We further suggest that once any problem was found for type specimen, the initial publishing author should be contacted to eliminate discrepancies or missing information as soon as possible.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We thank Profs. Xiong Jiang, Xiao Ningnian, Li Changlian, Shen Farong for checking the type specimens; and thank Prof. Zhu Shimo, Drs. Gao Jianjun, Li Xueyan, Xie Meng, Liang Xingcai, Zhang Wenxia and Prof. Yang Darong for revising the information of type specimens.
